

Improve performance and profitability of individual projects in your project portfolio

Project and Program Managers in project-based businesses can strategically prioritize, plan and control every aspect of their project portfolio – as well as individual projects – from a central workspace. The Project 360 Workspace gives organizations the tools to continuously increase productivity and on-time delivery across all stages in the project life cycle – adding value, strengthening performance, and improving results.

Project Managers take center stage

Project and Program Managers can actively contribute towards improving your firm's cash flow position, because clients whose payments are overdue can be contacted directly, thanks to easy access to the relevant contact information. Also, any high unbilled amount is proactively highlighted, so that appropriate measures can be initiated to ensure you get paid for services delivered.

Within the organization, PMs can follow up directly with project team members for missing timesheets, and with the finance department for billing that is overdue. Forecasts that are overdue are also highlighted for their immediate action.

Individual project workspaces

To help manage and control every aspect of a project on a day-to-day basis, the workspaces allow Project and Program Managers to navigate directly to any of the underlying project data that they need: from initiation through to budgeting and planning, monitoring, execution and billing.

Project portfolio dashboard

Project and Program Managers are provided with a project portfolio dashboard, which lists all of their projects. From one central workspace, they can manage, prioritize and control the time, resources, skills, and budgets necessary to deliver their projects with a profitable margin.

PMs are proactively notified in the dashboard about pending tasks that require their immediate attention. Completion Percentage for each individual project in the portfolio is displayed up front, to help planning and scheduling teams to identify the fastest, cheapest, or most suitable approach to deliver projects and programs.
